At Aishabai College of Education, students are actively encouraged and facilitated to engage in self-study courses, both online and offline, through various supportive mechanisms:

- 1. Provision of a Customized Time Table: The college recognizes the importance of dedicated time for self-study and offers flexible timetables. Students are allocated specific periods to focus on self-paced learning without the pressure of scheduled classes. For example, during examination preparation or when undertaking a certificate course, students are given breaks from regular classes to dedicate time for self-study.
- 2. Library Facilities: Aishabai College of Education, grants students full access to the well-stocked library, offering a wide range of books, journals, and e-resources essential for self-study. Students are encouraged to use the library for research and self-study purposes, especially for competitive exams, lesson planning, and supplementary reading materials for their coursework. For instance, many students preparing for competitive exams like TET (Teacher Eligibility Test) frequently use the college library to access exam-oriented books and reference materials.
- 3. ICT Lab and Computer Facilities: The college provides access to its state-of-the-art computer lab, where students can engage in online self-study courses, attend virtual workshops, and access e-learning platforms. This lab is equipped with high-speed internet and necessary software to aid in their studies. For example, students often use the ICT lab to complete online certifications in educational technology, such as Google Classroom training or ICT-integrated lesson planning courses.

4. Academic Guidance and Support: The faculty at Aishabai College of Education plays an active role in guiding students in their self-study efforts. Academic advisors offer one-on-one support to help students select appropriate courses or study materials based on their interests and career aspirations. For example, students interested in digital pedagogy are often recommended online courses in instructional design or given resources for blended learning techniques by their academic mentors.

Through these provisions, Aishabai College of Education fosters an environment where self-study is not only encouraged but also actively supported to ensure holistic academic growth and professional development.
