The Aishabai College of Education Supports Mushraffa Shishger, a Hearing Impairment Student from Batch 2021-23

The Aishabai College of Education has been a pioneer in providing inclusive education to students with diverse needs. One such student is Mushraffa Shishger, a hearing impairment student from Batch 2021-23. The college has taken a commendable step in supporting Mushraffa, ensuring that she receives equal opportunities to excel in her academic pursuits. College Provided support to Mushraffa.

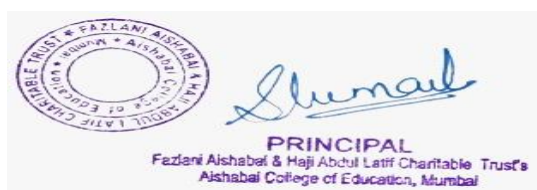

1. The college has provided videos for sign language in her classes. Through the video, Mushraffa can understand the lectures and participate in discussions without any barriers.
2. The college has also provided references in class to Mushraffa. This helps her to stay up-to-date with the course material and participate in class discussions.
3. The college has made available audio materials for all courses, which are accessible to Mushraffa through her hearing aids This enables her to listen to lectures and complete assignments independently.
4. The college has support in assignments to ensure that Mushraffa can complete them with ease. For example, assignments that require written responses have been replaced with audio or video recordings, allowing Mushraffa to demonstrate her understanding in a more accessible way.
5. The college has ensured that the physical infrastructure is accessible to Mushraffa. This includes installing ramps, elevators, and Braille signs, making it easier for her to move around the campus.

The support provided by the Aishabai College of Education has had a significant impact on Mushraffa's academic journey. She has been able to participate fully in classes, complete assignments, and engage with her peers without any barriers. Her confidence has grown, and she has become an active member of the college community.

The Aishabai College of Education's commitment to providing inclusive education is evident in its support for Mushraffa Shashighar. The college's efforts have enabled her to overcome the challenges associated with hearing impairment and excel academically. This report serves as a testament to the importance of inclusivity in education and highlights the college's dedication to providing equal opportunities for all students. But colleges need to support the following point.

1. The college should sensitize its faculty members about the needs of students with hearing impairments, ensuring that they are aware of the necessary accommodations required.
2. The college should continuously monitor and evaluate its support services for students with hearing impairments, making improvements as needed to ensure that they meet the evolving needs of students.
3. The college should provide peer support groups for students with hearing impairments, allowing them to connect and share their experiences.

By following these recommendations, the Aishabai College of Education can further enhance its support services for students with hearing impairments, ensuring that they receive an inclusive and accessible education.
